About APICS

APICS—The Educational Society for Resource Management is an international organization offering a full range of programs and materials on the latest business management concepts and techniques. These materials, developed under the direction of management experts, are available at the national and international levels.

Since 1957, APICS members have been at the forefront of such management and manufacturing achievements as the widespread use of material requirements planning (MRP) in the workplace and the introduction of dynamic philosophies that affect all areas of manufacturing management.

APICS' internationally recognized Certified in Production and Inventory Management (CPIM) program is a standard by which companies gauge individual knowledge and understanding of the production and inventory control concepts and methods. APICS administers thousands of CPIM exams around the world annually.

Answering the need for a more cross-functional, integrated workforce, APICS developed the Certified in Integrated Resource Management (CIRM) educational and self-assessment program. In conjunction with the CIRM program, APICS offers a variety of educational programs and services that provide information regarding the interdependencies of all business disciplines.

In addition, members receive the monthly APICS—The Performance Advantage and the quarterly Production and Inventory Management Journal. (The journal is sent to all members free upon request.)
