

Ring Modulation

A ring modulator receives two signals and outputs the sum and difference of their frequencies. So, if the frequencies of 700kHz and 1000kHz are inputted, a sound consisting of 1700kHz and 300kHz frequencies will be outputted. This produces a distorted, harsh, and metallic-like tone. Most ring modulators have one input and the other input is supplied by an internal source.